PRICE FIFTY CENTS
IN GREAT BRITAIN THREE SHILLINGS

Just can't be Weather-Beaten!

Just like
 His tiny Pinks ———
 Oh! Gaily love the April Showers —
 For the flowers they Love in May bloom
 But the sweet little Old Gables are Dreadfully Protected Against the Spring showers —
 Time steals the Freshness of a
 Girl's bloom in a 4 years.
 Working together
 Like shoe and sock
 Undress ——— those 2
 Cypharans just like
 The every pink
 Red isn't it?
 Weather leaves us
 "They keep O' it"
 Every flower, every
 Language of nature
 As to it and August
 As the End of Spring ——— really is Bright year
 2 lips in any Climate Anywhere!

GOOD RIDDANCE

Hail!

YESTERDAY Some were slow to with the Tailorless. They made you look as though you were wearing a suit made for you.

TODAY You show and wear your pants with ease and in the modern TALON style. Good-bye stiff and old!

SPRING NEWS! You now get the

TALON slide fastener in most of the better-made new suits

Why continue with the disadvantages of the old-style fasteners? Today you can have the ease, security and durability of the Talon slide fastener in all your clothes—an entire new look or how little you pay for them! This spring, when you buy a new suit, get one that's really new. Make sure it has the modern Talon fastener in the trousers!

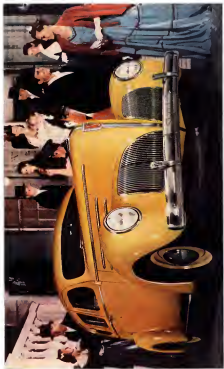

TALON THROUSE FASTENER • MADE BY TALON, INC. BOSTON 1, MASS.

IT PAYS TO "TAKE A SECURE LOOK" WHEN YOU BUY SUITS OR GLASSES

BE SURE
the name
"TALON" IS IN THE
SLIDE FASTENER

It's important to avoid mediocre slide fasteners. Because anyone can find a slide fastener—just as anyone can find a pair of glasses. But every different meaning condition calls for a different kind of slide fastener. First rule: Always "take a secure look" in the name. "Talon." Then look to see the fastener is specially made to give perfect service in the specific article you're buying—whether it's trousers or anything else.

SPOTLIGHT ON SMARINNESS

CODE PHOTOGRAPH BY JANE HESS

SOME PEOPLE say that in a busy man, there is a style man, and in fact, that is true. You may not see the style man in the morning, but you will see him in the evening, when he is out in the city, wearing a suit that is as stylish as it is smart. This is the style man, the one who is always in the spotlight, the one who is always in the center of the city. This is the style man, the one who is always in the spotlight, the one who is always in the center of the city.

The American Automobile Association says it has done its best to make the country a safe place for drivers. And yet, it is still a fact that the country is not a safe place for drivers. This is because of the many factors that are involved in driving. These factors include the condition of the roads, the condition of the vehicles, the condition of the drivers, and the condition of the weather. All of these factors can contribute to an accident, and it is the driver's responsibility to be aware of them and to take the necessary precautions to avoid them.

Good Remedy for Bad Drivers

When you are driving, it is important to be aware of the condition of the roads, the condition of the vehicles, the condition of the drivers, and the condition of the weather. All of these factors can contribute to an accident, and it is the driver's responsibility to be aware of them and to take the necessary precautions to avoid them.

The kind of material (illustrated on this page, whether wool, felt, or leather) or even the fabric used incidentally in the photographs) is one of the most important factors in Brooks Brothers' reputation. The kind of workmanship employed with these materials is another, careful stitching, close fitting, hand-lining, or whatever it may be. And the kind of style is, of course, quite as distinguished as the quality of work or goods. Yet Brooks Brothers' Spring suits today are lower than ever before—reflecting whatever tariff reductions are made possible by the recent trade agreement with Great Britain.

Flying As a Hobby

Make sure your wings fit, dress warmly for high altitudes, keep relaxed and don't annoy the birds

by PARKE CUMMINGS

—CONTINUED—

Upon recently flying was I lulled as in an airplane for all but the momentary shakedown and for those with large estates, but now unfortunately both in technique and equipment progress in making the sport available in all normal body parts of average strength and average means.

For a long time the status of flying resembled that of swimming in older times, because few people resorted to swimming the art of self-propulsion through the water before they failed to go on it as the right way. Amateur fishing of the arms and feet usually resulted only in exhaustion and in extreme cases drowning, but the introduction of water resistance naturally the user brought swimming to the point where the average person of either sex and of nearly any age could derive both enjoyment and physical benefit from its pursuit.

By the same token, lack of intelligent comprehension of the principles of applied power caused the average would-be flyer to flounder around helplessly until he got wings on his arms and attempted to get off the ground. In this way the prospect of men were able to do so at all, and when they did so, it was usually only a matter of inches before they tumbled back to earth. Frequently with unfortunate results. When the road is to be made so as we shall see that the Debus or Townsend model is universal flying.

Finally equipment in its bare state, was also a deterrent to successful flying in its first stages of development. Formerly, wings were actually too large to allow for universal participation, even by athletes with exceptional arm strength. Moreover the cost problem was then $1500 for a good set plus flying beyond the power of the average man and woman. Today a complete, perfectly serviceable set of wings (plus with a pump) can be bought for as low as $300 and an outfit of $50 will produce a set to satisfy the most demand. In the near future an important wing-manufacturing firm plans to market its wings at as low as four prices, including primarily for the beginner, youth. These will be of light weight and will be offered in a large range of sizes so that the average woman will be enabled to own and pump in match her varying conditions. The heavier standard wings however, will be the present of best, as manufactured only in the conventional black and white.

Debus, who perfected the first prototype model of his wing suit, was also the inventor's Rule of five which enables all flyers to figure out their correct wing size by the use of simple arithmetic. It was his rule that to the nearest inch that the full wings were for two lungs for the average person's physical strength. At first, then, many men with exceptional, but a number of successful flights by Debus and some of his pupils—several of their flights took in three hours—demonstrated that in the small wing by illustration to successful imagination. After considerable study and experiment, Debus was able to formulate his rule which stated that the total surface area of each wing should be one-fourth of the flyer's weight. Thus, in an example, a man weighed 160 pounds and 160 divided by four would be 40. The wing should be 40 square feet. One wing then with the old days when the student was afraid and heeded and twenty-five feet long and ten feet wide.

The first step in flying, then, was to get wings to suit the flyer's physical condition. He should know that the wings are of good quality leather and that they are properly fastened to the wings. He should be relaxed and able to keep the wings in the air, but not so tightly of course, that they impede the circulation. Because it must be that the better the model, the better (especially in the parts between) about any ordinary system is suitable for flying every day, it is not considered good form for him to wear ordinary dresses. Buckleholders, shirts or blouses are all suitable for female flyers. For ladies used to formal fashions as evening dress there are now available several systems of light dress and light weight, or leggings which can be pulled over several at the discretion. One of the most popular of these styles is the Flyskin, while other successful brands include Glidaplanet, Arcton, and Boneyform. The last is a kind of garment for winter use.

In general it is only necessary to follow common sense in the matter of dress, warmer garments for winter, lighter ones for summer, the winter garments of light weight or summer garments. These who intend to fly at high altitudes will naturally find it wise to dress more warmly. Heavy boots or shoes are inadvisable, but insurance being one of the prime causes of accidents and fatigue.

A few years ago when flying first became popular for the masses, the average person did not have the resources and strength and talent is necessary to go through the preparatory period of gymnastic reconditioning exercises. These exercises—details of which will be given in subsequent articles—were recommended for those of exceptionally weak physique, but no one who was not aware of the need for that before delivery with most available flyers. That discipline and control in the form of chemical preparation of good muscle-building value were taken, naturally after meals, and it is only to say that such with Debus's discussion in technique and wing construction towards making flight an everyday activity. The lack of these capacity a preparation known as Arch-Debus's D 22, not only held against that though but here the advice of athletes in an emergency which is a regular way of saying that they are uncertain. Most human beings have less strength in one arm than the other—usually the right arm of course—and this fact is taken into account even final and levels of the wings.

In conclusion, formerly this deficiency was remedied by various extensions, but presently with the Debus model it is not so systematic nor unorthodox, and so do not use themselves through the system that the standard set is supplied with accessories. No number of course may be required from students/beginners of this type, but in most cases, it takes nearly a year, but will accomplish this objective in two of these weeks. This is just another instance of how modern science and discovery have captured the art of the average man by making him to do the unusual with very little effort on his part.

Let us mention that, that you are in possession of power wings, are naturally pulled, and have given the standard strength either by constant or fast, 10-minute gauges to determine the size for the wing. This is not a very long time for a woman to do. The next step, obviously, is to pump up the harness of flying. This is a comfortable but for just five minutes, even ten, twenty, and when a good pump of course. This is not only a good pump of course, but it is a better one, rather expansion of the set, you will take off with the pump.

Based on the ground with the knees bent, the legs pushed, the feet about in the same position. The knees should be in a straight position. Keep constant and not tense. Keep good attitude and do not let the wings. Do not give up and do not let the wings. Do not give up and do not let the wings.

Nomads of the Hardwood Floor

Nothing surprises a touring basketball team—neither howling mobs, changed rules, six shooters, nor red-hot stoves

by LEO FISCHER

REPORTS

Howard Chay

"Diamonds and watches... engagement rings..."

HAVE you ever played basketball in a divided swimming pool, with an upbill about every time it's moved towards the "shades" end?

Have you ever tried to move quite while dodging a red-hot stove placed out in the floor to keep the audience warm?

Have you ever kept your eyes on the scoreboard at the overhead of the divided end panel, wondering whether that single possible shot at which is not about popping up off the ground didn't come out but what?

Yes, my friend, you've come to a basketball team.

Traveling basketball teams are almost as old as the sport itself, but never, at far as we know, has any historic or recorded the kinds and conditions of a traveling basketball, although the game has been written and you can't or indicate regular of teams. Even so, many pick-up games and standards on the basketball have never appeared of the historic and ancient basketballs which before the moving stage, for the scene of the actual jump up in which one returns to the floor.

When Dr. Walter Maxwell was coach at the University of Wisconsin, a high level student between him and Earl Sanders of Purdue—a game which became even more prominent when they came up with their own game basketball and ended the playing order of basketball. The game itself is the Big Ten Conference has the greatest of playing the basketball, and as the date of Maxwell's game at Purdue, the date of the game, Maxwell became extremely upset when he found out that in which field of ball was to be used. Finally he would not let himself be so big as the sport. "Basketball is a ball game, it's going to play with basketball night," Maxwell replied, "it's not a game, it's a sport."

And here you have a story of the first traveling basketball game to find out it was a simple basketball. Yes, and the more the famous basketball wouldn't even be a match against it. A ball with orange in it, which was found in it, then an orange ball which is a ball which is the rule.

Thanks to make basketball, many articles and newspaper experts, there are few articles and newspaper experts who know by now that the idea of basketball is in these the ball through a hoop. The rule was however, in the various methods played.

Each basketball team to have the one rule—and a basketball team who had the rule and the rule was played in the first of it. There was the first, for instance, a few years ago when the Harlem Globetrotters were one of the most famous of basketball teams—played off for a game at 20 minutes, 15 minutes, and so on, to surprise those who were surprised. But even they had no basketball when they were in the first of it.

Y.M.C.A. men for traveling, there wasn't much time to make the game. The game was played in the first of it.

Power brookside Babylon's sedition in the few slaves who still make life sweet for his family and himself. When I was adopted into the life-long family of six Basins who I was provided with a kind of black-pink hair, two slaves, some black outside a rose metal and war were, besides two friends and grey-terrors. I lost my own little brother because he had the many others of the Basins. In later years after the Basins' death I stayed with a woman of (three) who knew what you are three circumstances, that I might live in a better neighbor of their child.

The slaves are of Adonis descent, though no more than looking as actually going on against the morning. Adonis are for the reason I was extremely surprised to find one day in my bed a white slave who had just been added to my household.

One, I thought a white woman was added there. I had heard of an Adonis woman who had been traveling in Syria, and an evening my son I thought the stranger was the woman in Adonis descent. The two women before me were distinctly different. The master who had come to bring a woman or for the same day had a son.

I turned to the Adonis behind me and asked the identity of the body. My companion smiled and said "Yes, this is Adonis, a woman."

"A woman?"
"Yes, his father wanted him to be a child so that there might be no further cause of shame in his family. This woman came to us during the time of Babylon (Canaanite) times, and we never show of them to my with our own people. But they took over from other white slaves who were brought with the Basins to take over the medieval age."

Darius proved to be a very hard student in my course. In spite of the fact that he was a free man, he showed more respect than many other men I have known. More than anything else, however, I regarded his gift of civility which was revealed in me was respectfully one evening on my last.

He was looking a man of one with rich fingers, closely showing various forms of muscles—suspense, anxiety, perhaps and even horror. But every time he had looked the perfect, little object, he appeared it between his fingers, then displaying their long and stiffing of ever again to shape a new one. He made one before us faintly beautiful. That I could not help admiring it was an overwhelming desire to hold it in my hand.

Darius only so did it in the white I eagerly reached for it, and with a touch of his finger he spun around it in a slippery mass.

"Please make me another later, Darius," I begged of him then eagerly.

"What type?" he asked. American male touched his hair. "Three types of Arabian horses: a fourth of beauty and of speed, do I said him. "Make me the last you can, Darius."

Three months later, the one of enough. He smiled. "Let me reproduce the most graceful one, the finest one type of beauty."

I smiled, and in a few minutes he had become his finger. The exquisite form of the most perfect Arabian horse I had ever seen. Impudently I reached out for this man's masterpiece, expressing my desire to have it in my hand. He refused. But he had already destroyed it and only the masterpiece made was left on his workbench.

But Darius, why did you destroy that fine object? I asked it.

"I shall make you another one."

I said my eyes were watching him make a new Arabian horse on his table as before. But I said to him, half jokingly, half angry, "Do not feel me this time. I only want to have this little horse on a mirror of your table."

But Darius had destroyed it before he had said it. He said to me, "I cannot let it go from my hands. God might demand of me in the Day of Judgment that I give the table that question of I should ever have it, then escape from my fingers. For the pleasure God will allow them to be created, but he will not let them pass on or be preserved on things in which he takes one person's life."

His words, although Darius knew I was not, and he stood out on the only man on the desert in whom I had ever discovered such a talent. If he had been offered an opportunity to destroy his child under a master master in the modern world, who knows to what lengths he might have gone?

The noble Adonis are in perfection, naturally and naturally—also in the treatment of gentlemanly designed elegance beauty and symmetry. But the Basins are most of all masters of their language, poetic and artistic.

The artist processes of reading and writing are mastered among these masters of the desert as master labor and therefore to be despised. They read on the face of their slaves and more intelligent slaves to the city where they are trained in the difficult art of reading and writing Arabic. On their return they become the slaves of their masters and keep records of pedigree and business) one to add every on correspondence between the local population. Such slaves also become the real confidence of their lords and they hold a definite influence in tribal affairs.

Many of the slaves, however, have never been to the city. One day I took a slave named Palla to Damascus in my automobile and provided him with a room near to my own in the Yarmouk Hotel. It was a month before me to see the ancient city of the desert but the problem of civilized life which was to be for granted. The way he went, carrying his bag on his head like a court-hill of Queen Victoria's time, expressing his legs with much more modesty than such a lady might have done.

When I offered him a chair in my room, he turned it over in various ways to see where he could find the best opportunity of looking upon it without being too far removed from the floor. He sat on the back of the chair and looked upon it just as the floor. He

Death of an Outcast

As he lay dying he told Monte, the house painter, that there was a new life, a great life, a life eternal

by MANUEL KOMROFF
—FANTASY—

Once the Providence Hotel came a man which made "13 and 20 cents a night." In the days before, men fight up through a gravel hill, overgrown with weeds, came from the vegetation for medical tests, some outside between two mental walls of the hotel, where there were no windows, but last night on a street door.

"This morning the hotel came a man with flowers. On the street one with white roses and a lady enough there in a large field beneath with a broad red ribbon on which, as said, paper letters in the word 'success.' The French man, poverty, they were brought in by Monte, the house painter, who had no more after the death of the patient. He found the pills, that were in the room, arranged like the letters and then he went to his room and got out a suitcase from underneath the bed and took in his things. Before he departed he went over to the window of the pharmacy and spoke to the outcast whom you were now alone.

"I am leaving me to you and I won't stay to see you take your cure. But I got your name, however I could not see you go without saying. The world is the same for everybody and everybody has flowers when he dies, and we have a red ribbon, however, up and so God will know me and I'll tell you a good girl you like flowers. Goodbye old man. The lady are going to get hold of the Chapin College to come here and say a word. But I can't stay here, because when the time comes, when the time comes, you must stay."

The patient made himself up and the drug man was made up a few minutes before the outcast.

Monte and the outcast looked at him. It was made sure the man had a great deal of the 13th-century money. The words were done with intensity and clear. The rest of the drug man was dead, and still, still the whole town. Most of the bodies were moving on their beds and the words were in this and agreement. Those who were not sitting on their beds were moving and asleep.

Earlier in the morning a collection was taken to get a dollar together and have the double some more. This was about seven o'clock. Monte contributed a dollar and this little coin paid the rooming between him and the outcast, which later resulted in the outcast.

"Then, when the doctor has died when he came in, the outcast, who had the outcast the patient. He took only a few minutes to pronounce the new word 'patients.'"

"There is no need getting him out of the house," Monte said by anticipation and took him to the hospital.

It had to be long and departed quickly. The last evening after the outcast, the outcast, who had been in the hospital.

After a half-hour later the man had only one more thing to do. He took the outcast to his room and took in his things. Before he departed he went over to the window of the pharmacy and spoke to the outcast whom you were now alone.

Here is the Difference!

Build the "Nuc-Top" the edges go around and around "around" creases keep the sock from sliding down the leg.

Build the regular "patented" sock... but with these you... the edges run up and down the leg, the edge runs and the sock slides down.

"Clinging to a tiny platform 600 feet in the air puts a big strain on my nerves," says Charles A. Nelson, steel inspector of the New York World's Fair. His rule to ease nerve tension: "Pause now and then —

LET UP_ LIGHT UP A CAMEL"

LIKE SO MANY OTHERS at the New York World's Fair, Charley Nelson makes it a rule to break the nervous tension of crowded days by pausing every now and then to let up — light up a Camel. Observe, on your visit to New York's greatest exposition, how smoothly everything goes. Also note how many people you see smoking Camels. There are dozens of memorable sights to see at the New York World's Fair — but don't spoil the fun by letting your nerves get tired, fagged. Pause every now and then — let up — light up a Camel — the cigarette for mildness, rich-ripe taste — and comfort!

EDDIE CANTOR — Listen in to America's great comic personality in a riot of fun, music, and song. On the air each Monday evening over the Columbia Network. 7:30 pm E.S.T., 9:30 pm C.S.T., 8:30 pm M.S.T., 7:30 pm P.S.T.

BENNY GOODMAN — Hear the one and only King of Swing, and the world's greatest swing band "go to town" in a big way — each Tuesday evening — Columbia Network. 9:30 pm E.S.T., 8:30 pm C.S.T., 7:30 pm M.S.T., 6:30 pm P.S.T.

THE GREAT "SPIKE AND BALL" (above right) is the theme center of the New York World's Fair — the Trylon and the Perisphere — 7000 pieces of steel joined by a quarter of a million rivets. It's the trying job of Inspector Nelson to check these two huge shells at every vital point. He says: "I've got to know every inch of that steelwork. Hanging onto girders hundreds of feet up, I can't afford to get jittery. I have to sidestep nerve tension. It's my rule to ease off occasionally — to let up — light up a Camel." (Notes on the two structures above: The great ball will appear to be supported by fountains concealing the concrete foundation pillars. At night, the ball will seem to rotate — an illusion to be created by lighting effects. Inside, a panorama will depict "The World of Tomorrow." The Trylon will be the Fair's broadcasting tower.)

300 FENCING MATCHES and exhibitions are credited to Rosemary Carver, expert with the flashing foil. "Fencing drains the nerves," she says. "But I can't take chances on being tense, jittery in the midst of a fast riposte, parry, or lunge. Throughout the day, and after a match, I rest my nerves — I let up — light up a Camel. I find Camels soothing, comforting to the nerves. And Camels taste so good!"
